

Most Common Side Effects

There are very few side effects of using our lash serums. During the first week of application, you may notice minor itching or redness to the eye. However, these symptoms usually go away after few days of the regular dosage application.

Some other minor side effects that have been observed at the site of application include darkening of the skin, eye dryness, and irritation, and reddening of the eyelids. These conditions are never severe as long as the proper application instructions are followed.

Additional side effects possible with use of lash serums

The most common side effects after using lash serums are an itching solution sensation in the eyes and/or eye redness, which were reported in approximately 4% of users. These symptoms may occur immediately after use, but should usually last only for a short period of time. Eye itching and eye redness are not allergic reactions, and does not mean that your eyes are being harmed. However, if eye redness persists you should stop using the product immediately and seek the advice of your physician.

Lash serums may cause other less common side effects, which typically occur on the skin close to where the serum has been applied, or in the eyes. These include eye irritation, dryness of the eyes, and/or redness of the eyelids.

Skin darkening is another less common side effect. This condition causes areas of the skin to become darker than the surrounding skin color.

Increased brown iris pigmentation has occurred when similar products were used as eye drops to medical conditions. Although iris pigmentation was not reported when used as a lash serum, patients should still be advised about the potential for this side effect which is likely to be permanent.

If you develop a new ocular condition, experience a sudden decrease in visual acuity, have ocular surgery, or develop any ocular reactions, particularly conjunctivitis and/or eyelid reactions, you should stop using the product immediately and seek the advice of a physician.

Are there any other side effects I should consider?

Our products are intended for use on the skin of the upper eyelid only and SHOULD NOT be used on the lower eyelids. If you are using medication for intraocular pressure (IOP), or if you have a history of abnormal IOP, you should only use our lash serums under a doctor's supervision.

Because it's possible for hair growth to occur in other area of the skin that come in contact with the lash serums, please be sure to use a q-tip or cotton swab to blot away any excess serum after application.
